SECRETS REVEALED.
NEWS ABOUT THE LATE CAMPAIGN.
DEPOSITIONS IN THE KNIGHT-JOHNSON ELECTION CASE.

A REPUBLICAN LEADER'S EVIDENCE.
INTERESTING LETTERS PRODUCED.
The Bargain with Norman Smith Explained.

The taking of depositions on behalf of Colonel W. C. Knight, who proposes to contest the seat in the Senate to which General Bradley T. Johnson was recently elected, was commenced in the office of Mr. James Neeson yesterday morning before Robert D. Neeson, a notary public. Colonel Knight was represented by Mr. James Neeson and Mr. John S. Wise, and General Johnson by Judge Ould, Major Stiles, and Mr. Royall.

Mr. Lawson Nunnally was the first witness introduced. The defendant, by counsel, objected to proceeding to take testimony under the notice served on him by Colonel Knight indicating his intention to contest defendant's seat in the Senate, because said notice does not disclose any sufficient legal grounds of contest.

Mr. Lawson Nunnally was the first witness sworn. When asked for whom he voted counsel for defendant objected to his answering the question.

1. Because it is not a lawful question to be put to this or any other witness. The Constitution of the State requires an election for senator to be by ballot, an essential ingredient of which is secrecy. This privilege of secrecy belongs not only to the voter who voted at the precinct where the witness voted. The right to call one witness to disclose how he voted involves the right to call every voter, and thus it will be easily and readily found out not only the witnesses voted, but also those who are not witnesses, or those who refused to testify, did vote. We protest that no question can be put to a witness the answer to which tends to disclose how others or any other voted. The objection does not go to the competency of the witness, but to the propriety of the question.

Mr. Neeson moved that the witness be sworn. When asked for whom he voted counsel for defendant objected to his answering the question.

Question: Was there any money agreed to be furnished to the Republican Committee by the Independents, or parties representing their committee, to be used for the purpose of getting out the Republican vote for Knight and Starke? If so, how much, and how and by whom disbursed?

Answer: General Imboden stated that the Independents were willing to pay for all necessary and reasonable expenses incidental to the election. An estimate was made at that or some subsequent meeting of the committee (I don't recollect which) of the amount of money which would be necessary to defray said expenses.

Question: Was there anything said at any of these interviews about the support to be given by Colonel Norman Smith, or any other nominee of the Republican party, by the Independent party? Was it or not a part of the implied understanding arrived at that such support should be given?

Answer: There was an understanding that such support should be rendered Colonel Smith, but the amount and character of said support were entirely inferential.

Question: What do you mean by your answer by the word "inferential"? Answer: I mean this: The committee stated that they would support the Republican party, but they did not state the amount or character of the support.

Question: Did the overtures made to the Independent party proceed from the Independent alone, or did they come from other sources also?

Answer: As far as I know the overtures were made by the Independent party, but I do not know whether they were or not.

Question: Do you not know the fact that J. R. Popham and H. E. Shields, both representatives of the Independent party, were active in securing Republican support for B. T. Johnson?

Answer: Colonel Popham, to the best of my belief and knowledge, was. I cannot speak with such a degree of precision regarding Colonel Shields, but my impression is that he favored the election of General Johnson.

Question: Is it not the fact that many colored men were employed by General Johnson, or his supporters, to solicit the support of colored voters or induce them to stay away from the polls?

Answer: I have heard of several colored men who were very zealous in support of General Johnson, and I did hear them say they intended to advise their colored friends if they could not vote for General Johnson not to vote at all.

Question: Will you state whether or not a few days before the election General Johnson was solicited by a colored man to give him a letter to be sent to the Independent party, or to be sent to the Independent party?

Answer: General Johnson did solicit an interview with me about a week previous to the election, in which he stated that the opposition to his election was bitter and that he was further stated that he would be gratified if I would give him personal support and whatever influence I had with the Republicans in the city. I told him I could not promise. As a party-man, my party had not endorsed him, and I could not do so. He was from Maryland, and he was a colored man, and he was a Republican.

Question: Did General Johnson when he solicited you to give him a letter to be sent to the Independent party, or to be sent to the Independent party, say that he was from Maryland, and that he was a colored man, and that he was a Republican?

Answer: I infer from what he said he did know that he had been working for the election of General Johnson, and he was from Maryland, and he was a colored man, and he was a Republican.

Question: Did he or not say that he had felt your influence against him wherever he had gone to secure Republican support, or some such similar expression?

Answer: He did say that in each ward in the city he had felt my influence with the Republicans, and owing to said influence he was anxious for my support.

Question: In response to further questions, Captain Johnson stated that most of his interviews concerning the campaign for Knight and Starke were held with J. S. Wise or J. D. Imboden. I don't recollect that either said much to me of the relative degrees of Conservatism of the opposing candidates, but they did regard the Republican party as the only party that was honest and upright, and that they were not corrupt political associates, to break down the political influence that had controlled several former elections, and had controlled the nomination of this one on the Conservative side. They stated it was more a contest for principles than for party.

Question: Was it not distinctly stated when Norman Smith's candidacy was mentioned that while his name on the ticket would bring out the colored vote in the county the benefit it would do the ticket in the city would be more than offset by the effect on the Union Conservatives and for the reason was it not understood before the election-day that while the Independent would not place him on their ticket, but leave the third name blank, another set of tickets with his name on them should be printed for those who chose to vote that ticket?

Answer: Something assisting to that was said, the precise phraseology of which I cannot give.

Question: Did you infer that the question of supporting him was left to the option of each voter?

Answer: I did not understand the Independent were pledged to him as a party, but I did suppose he would get about two hundred of their votes.

Question: In your answer to the thirteenth question upon re-examination you speak of receiving certain specified sums of money from different named persons, and that all the rest you received was paid by Mr. Maury. How much was paid you by him, and was it paid you by the firm of R. H. Maury, banker, or by some other Mr. Maury?

Answer: About three hundred and seventy-five dollars were paid me by Mr. Maury, who is, I understand, named Mr. Richard Maury, son of R. H. Maury, the banker.

Question: Are you certain that the interview which you had with General Johnson of which you have spoken was at your instance or his?

Answer: I request came from a third party, who told me that General Johnson would be glad to see me, and he (the third party) requested me to state an hour that would suit my convenience. That was the first and only interview with General Johnson in relation to the election. The third party alluded to is Captain L. F. Boswell.

Question: By Judge Ould: At the only interview between yourself and General Johnson did you not state explicitly to him that you would not support or aid him because his election would be the triumph of the Conservative party, and you thought it to be your duty to break that party down?

Answer: I did say something substantially that involved that idea as one of the reasons why I could not support him.

Question: By Mr. Wise: Can you recall any of the reasons why you gave General Johnson your support or his?

The manuscript of the notary public passed out of the hands of our reporter at this point, and Captain Johnson's exact language was therefore not obtainable. He was understood to have said that General Johnson told him that he understood he was a progressive man, and that he ought to oppose any policy which would exclude anything or anybody solely because he was not born in Virginia or he was not originated in Virginia.

The taking of the depositions lasted from 9 A. M. to 7 P. M., most of which time Captain Johnson was on the stand.

The taking of other depositions will be commenced at 9 o'clock this morning.

A BLOODY ASSAULT.
AN ESCAPED PRISONER CAPTURED.
An Officer of the Chain-Gang Out in a Dozen Places.

Yesterday afternoon about half-past 3 o'clock Officer Henry O'Dwyer, of the chain-gang, was nearly cut to pieces by Buck Oakley, a negro desperado.

O'Dwyer had carried his section of the chain-gang to the jail from their work, and had passed by home, on Seventeenth street, and was proceeding to Mr. Sol. Wise's clothing store to purchase an overcoat when he encountered Oakley. Oakley escaped from the chain-gang, while at work in Moore Park, some four or five weeks ago, and as O'Dwyer came face to face with him, opposite Clark's shoe-store, No. 1439 Main street, he halted him.

"What do you want with me?" asked Oakley.

"I want you to walk down to the station-house with me," responded O'Dwyer.

O'Dwyer then advanced and put his hand in the collar of Oakley, and turned his face down the street in the direction of the station-house. After proceeding a few steps O'Dwyer said: "I reckon I'd better put the 'nippers' on you, you are such a runner."

With which to secure the prisoner. While O'Dwyer's right hand was in his pocket the negro gave him a tremendous blow on the back of the head, and then drew a knife and cut him more than a dozen times, making several deep wounds, from which the blood streamed until the pavement was covered with it. Faint and nearly blinded by the fierce attack of his adversary, O'Dwyer drew his pistol. Oakley speedily snatched it from his fingers and gave O'Dwyer a terrific blow in the left eye with the butt of it, knocking him down.

All this passed in an inconceivable short space of time. O'Dwyer called for help, while resisting with all his feeble powers, and when the gentlemen ran to his assistance Oakley fled. Oakley was taken down the street and down Fifteenth almost to Cary, where he was secured by Messrs. E. A. Hopkins, M. A. Whiting, and Richard Moore.

Crowds soon gathered around Oakley and the scene. Seeing the latter covered with blood, and apparently nearly dead, the negro rather triumphing in his victory, there was a disposition to lynch him. Several parties were asked if they could produce sufficient rope to hang him to a lamp-post, and when when asked they said they could not, and the police shortly arrived, Oakley was taken down to the First station-house unharmed.

When it was suggested that his neck was in danger he replied: "Ump, I ain't afraid. They ain't gwine to hang me. What I done?"

He was then moved to his cell in the First station-house unharmed.
